

A governance framework for global peace, human rights, and equitable institutions.

The current international system is unable to prevent war, genocide, corruption, or planetary degradation. We propose a structured, democratic, and rights-based global framework for the 21st century.

The Problem

Persistent conflict, human rights abuses, and climate instability reveal fundamental limitations in existing systems of sovereignty and global governance.

Core Principles

- Peace through the outlawing of war
- Protection of human rights
- Rule of law and accountability
- Fair representation and economic justice
- Truth and transparent governance

Institutional Blueprint

Key components include a planetary constitution, global elections, anti-corruption infrastructure, a unified peacekeeping force, and a transparent global taxation model.

Strategic Path Forward

Change must be nonviolent, democratic, and grounded in public education and political participation.
