

Is the Peace Freedom Justice Fairness movement too unrealistic and idealistic

Many people believe that the goals of the PFJF movement is too idealistic and unrealistic and that may be a valid criticism, but should that really stop us from trying.

It is true that human nature has prevented past attempts at improving the condition of humanity.

Every movement must consider human nature—both its strengths and weaknesses.

The only exclusion to membership in this movement is a resort to violence.

You are a member of this movement, if you say you are, you only need to support some of our goals and objectives to bring more Peace, Freedom, Justice and Fairness to all the members of our species.
